

Risk Assessments

A Health & Safety Executive (HSE) requirement in all office locations

Risk assessments don't need to be complicated

-  They should be carried out by colleagues that work in the office being assessed rather than the business owners.
-  The results should be shared with everyone.
-  The responsibility for taking the agreed action to reduce or eliminate the risk will be assigned to a named person.
-  There will be a date for any agreed action to be concluded.
-  Risk assessments should be regularly be reviewed.
-  All colleagues should feel able to discuss any concerns with their line manager.
-  A risk assessment template is included in this pack, and one should be completed for each branch.
-  Where multiple disciplines operate in one building, all disciplines should be consulted, but only one assessment per building is required.
-  A copy of each completed risk assessment should be sent to a director of the company.
